SOCIETY DANCED A Pretty Cotillion at Progress Hall.

A FAIRY SPELL was cast over the terpsichorean scenes last evening in Progress Hall where the gay social set enjoyed the figures of the cotillion, the last large function of the season before the fall of Lent fell with the striking of the midnight hour. There was a kaleidoscopic mingling of color in the beautiful toilettes of the debutantes.
In the favors which they transferred to the waiting gallants and in the rich hues of the huapala vine which was trailed with artistic effect around the hall.
Throughout the gayety there mingled the strains of dreamy waltzes.

The figures of the cotillion were new and so perfectly and charmingly carried out as each set went through their intricacies under the guidance of the two leaders, that ripples of applause came from those who watched. Few cotillions have been given in Honolulu which can be said to have been so successful, even the elements contributing not a little to the evening's pleasure. Through the hall breezes swept from the Fall, which were cool and delightful, and the play of fans was mostly done in the spirit of flirtation. The music, the beauty of the women, and the exquisite gowns, all combined to bring out the innate love of enjoyment in everyone and there was nothing during the evening which could seem to have been added to make the cotillion more perfect.

Under the brilliant array of lights, the huapala vine with its orange-hued blossoms, formed a tasteful background for the heavier decorations of bamboo, ferns, crotons and palms, the latter being used on the platform with a conservatory effect. In the retiring room opposite the music stand, were the favor tables at which the patronesses presided, and there was a huge punch bowl in the room facing the audience. Over all the archways the huapala vine was festooned, mingling harmoniously below with delicate green and white striped bamboo stems. Native musicians occupied the platform screened partially from view by a profusion of palms and ferns.

The patronesses, Mesdames P. M.
Hatch, F. M. Swanzey, S. M. Damon, H.
R. Macfarlane and McNeal, presided over the favor tables throughout the evening, the pretty what-nots being spread out where all could see. Mrs. Mary Gunn, who gave the cotillion, received most of the guests as they reached the top of the stairway. At half past nine the musicians played a waltz as a preliminary to the first figure. Following this Lieutenant Hancock, U. S. A., and Miss Gertrude Bates, a charming San Francisco girl, glided out upon the polished floor for the first figure, the Debutante's March, and gave the signal for the first set to follow him. Those in the first set were Mrs. Mary Gunn, J. Tarn McGrew, Miss May Damon, Mana Widemann, Miss Juliet King, Clifford Kimball, Miss Gardie Macfarlane, Walter Dillingham, Helen Macfarlane, R. E. Wright, Miss Mary Widdfield, Mr. Madeline, Miss Marion Scott and Richard Spaulding.

At the signal of the whistle a merry group ran toward the favor table, almost overpowering the waiting patronesses, who deftly conferred upon the anxious debutantes pretty picture hats made of crepe paper and artistically covered with artificial blossoms, which each at once donned, the young men receiving favors of roses for their buttonholes. Miss Helen Macfarlane received one of red; Miss Marion Scott, pink with black bows; Miss Juliet King, blue with bunches of daisies; Gardie Macfarlane, pink with roses of the same color; Mrs. J. S.
Walker, white figured crepe with pink roses; Miss Bates, straw colored with black Alsatian bows; Miss Damon, pink and white; Mrs. Gunn, red; Mrs. Harry Macfarlane (nee Dunn), drew a quaint old-fashioned poke hat, which was worn quite demurely. The other two sets succeeded the first in rotation, until all the ladies wore attractive favors. The scene during the changes of the cotillion was fascinating. During the intervals between figures soft music was played and the punch bowl was sought frequently.

The second figure was the serpentine, in which Japanese parasols and canes were the favors. When the first set went upon the floor the ladies opened the pa-rasols and the couples danced beneath their shade, the gentlemen holding aloft canes from which fluttered parti-colored ribbons. This was one of the prettiest figures and the applause was long and hearty. The marches and countermarches were exceedingly picturesque, and flavored of a gay-carnival scene. In the third, or circle figure, heart-shaped cards of red were given to the couples, who planned them directly over the spot where their hearts are supposed to lie. Upon the cards were pasted the figures of beautiful women of the stage, noted beauties of the land, and interesting thumb-nail sketches, some even risqué, cut from illustrated magazines. There were many exchanges of these after they left the hands of the patronesses. The gentlemen were given Napoleon hats of paper.

The last figure was the Confetti March, in which handfuls of confetti were showered by the dancers, until the gowns of the ladies and the sober black garb of the gentlemen scintillated with the bright bits.

The figures were carried through without a hitch, and much credit is due Lieut. Hancock and Miss Bates for the skillful manner in which they conducted the cotillion. Following the cotillion, there was general dancing, during which delicious strawberry ice cream, whipped cream, cakes and punch were served.

Among the attractive gowns noticed was that of Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, a beautiful effect in spangled net over blue silk, worn décolleté; Mrs. J. S. Walker wore chiffon closely ruffled and trimmed with wide bands of blue panne velvet; Miss Bates wore a simple white Swiss; Miss Gardie Macfarlane, blue pina with violet flowers; Miss Helen Macfarlane, blue pina; Miss Damon, white mull; Miss Ward, blue silk trimmed with pearl pas-sementerie; Miss Mary Widdfield, white mousseline de sole; Miss Bender, white foularde, trimmed with lace and chiffon; Juliet King, white mousseline de sole; Miss Rosie Cunha, white Swiss trimmed with white applique lace; Mrs. Mary Mort-Smith Bird, blue over pink silk; Miss Bacon, pink organdie, trimmed with black velvet and white lace.

Mrs. Ivers, handsome yellow satin, trimmed with chiffon ruffles; Mrs. Porter Boyd, beautiful spangled net over silk; Miss Gillette, white organdie; Miss Alice Jones, green silk, trimmed with white lace; Miss Sara Robertson, yellow organdie, trimmed with black; Mrs. H. A. Allen, black shirred silk; Miss Dutton of San Francisco, white flowered organdie; Mrs. Hawes, cream satin trimmed with lace and chiffon; Miss Irene Dickson, white organdie; Miss Charlotte Hall, white organdie; Miss Gregg, pale green crepe; Miss Marion Scott, silk mull; Miss Neumann, figured organdie; Mrs. Gunn, white or-gandie; Miss Davis, white organdie; Mrs. Nott, Paris gown trimmed with valenciennes lace; Mrs. Walbridge, gray silk trimmed with lace and black net; Mrs. S. M. Damon, handsome lavender silk trimmed with real lace; Mrs. Swanzey, white mousseline de sole; Mrs. F. M. Hatch, white mousseline de sole, trimmed with satin ribbons; Mrs.

McNeal, white lace over white; Mrs.
Scott, white figured silk; Mrs. H. R.
Macfarlane, black jet lace over black silk.

Those present at the affair were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. S.
E. Damon, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Swanzey, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. E. F.
